Partnership Knowledge Sharing – GUIDE FOR PARTNERS (version March 2022)

The research work we want to report on was done (all or partially) with NETOLNEW Partnership grant funding:

- > No specific guidelines apply
- > Share with who we are and what we do if it suits you. For example:

"We are one of nine Indigenous community Partners of the NEXOLNEW Research Project, a national collaborative Partnership of Indigenous scholars, Indigenous community leaders, and allies involved in Indigenous language revitalization. Together, we are working to understand and enhance Indigenous adults' contributions to Indigenous languages in Canada. NEXOLNEW translates as "one mind, one people" or "doing things as one" in the SENĆOŦEN language."

Acknowledge Partnership

> In your writing and oral presentations, mention the overall Partnership, who we are and what we do. For example:

"The NETOLNEW Research Project is a national Partnership of Indigenous scholars, Indigenous community leaders, and allies involved in Indigenous language revitalization. Together, we are working to understand and enhance Indigenous adults' contributions to Indigenous languages in Canada. NETOLNEW translates as "one mind, one people" or "doing things as one" in the SENĆOŦEN language."
